THE NOVEL SCHEME HE ADVOCATES.

He Gets a Cold Shoulder from Various Statesmen—In a Dentist's "Studio"—Changes in Architecture—Famous Gaming Places—A Trickster Comes to Grief.

Special Correspondence of The Star.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—The scheme of a Colonel Sellers, whom I know, is to establish a school of politics. He soberly believes that instruction in the practical workings of office getting and office holding would be a vast public benefit, besides creating a new profession—that of statesmanship. He is aware that political science is taught in the colleges, but he maintains that the training there afforded is of no real use, being all finedrawn theories, and in no way comparable in thoroughness with the education of clergymen, physicians and artists in special schools. His intention is to engage a fac[illegible] of veteran, capable, weighty politicians, and to graduate students who aim to follow the profession of office seeking in all dignity and potency. In other respects his brain is normal. He conceives that the great defect in our American system of representative government is the lack of culture in politics. He would supply a lot of competent candidates for offices. He wrote to a hundred eminent men, explaining his plan, and asking if they would consider a direct offer of a position in the undertaking. A whole month has elapsed, and he is grieved to report that he has received only nine replies of any sort, not one of which encourages him to go ahead. From Samuel J. Tilden, William M. Evarts, John Kelly, Dorman B. Eaton and Abram S. Hewitt he got merely formal acknowledgements, through secretaries, of the reception of his epistle. Ninety-one deigned no attention whatever. Carl Schurz facetiously wrote: "Your invention is novel, judging by a cursory examination." Samuel J. Randall: "I fear that your scheme is rather Utopian." Ex-President Hayes: "At all events, the improvement of office seekers would be an improvement of office holders—you are right to that extent, and nobody will be apt to contradict you." Ex-Senator Mahone: "I have been much entertained by the novelty of your idea, and it is to be hoped that you will live to see it come to something." But there was no indication of a wild desire to get places in the faculty of the school of politics.

There is readiness enough in

to grab right hold of new ideas that are frivolous, and it is a pity that their inclination in that respect cannot be diverted into higher and broader channels. I went yesterday to have a tooth pulled. New York has several places exclusively for that jerky sort of surgery, wherein no other dentistry is practiced, and where great quantities of laughing gas are used. The accustomed patient sits placidly in the chair, breathes out of the bag, goes to sleep, and awakens in a minute or so to find that his tooth is gone. He has suffered neither dread nor pain. But the novices do not divest themselves of the fright of anticipation, and the waiting room is therefore full of woe begone faces and trembling limbs, and the voice of persuasion is constantly raised. This time, however, I saw a bevy of fashionably dressed girls, not one of whom showed symptoms of aching teeth or palpitating terror.

"Now, ladies," said one of the operators, "please step this way."

They went into the sanctum, but were not so perfectly secluded that I could not see what was done to them. Each in turn took a blithesome seat in the chair, breathed the gas, fell back insensible, speedily aroused herself, and gave place to another subject. Then they paid 50 cents and departed, laughing and chattering.

"They take the gas for exhilration," said the doctor when I asked for an explanation. "It usually a cure for headache; it revivifies a jaded brain, and it has suddenly become a stylish thing to take. After a late night at a reception, or any other cause of lassitude, the belles visit us, in parties like the one you've seen, and take light doses of laughing gas. That is the latest swell fad, you know."

SO RAPIDLY DOES NEW YORK CHANGE

her fashions in all things that a brown stone front is no longer desirable for a residence, and all the allusions in satirical literature to that material as symbolic of wealth and pretentiousness now require elimination. Fully half the tenement houses erected within the past five years have brown stone facades, in just about the style of architecture that was significant of rich inhabitants last decade. Other kinds of stone and pressed bri[illegible] are stuffs of which the home of Cro[illegible] [illegible]ow built in ornate [illegible]pe, and a long w[illegible] through the section of the city at present under the most costly process of improvement did not disclose to me a single structure of brown stone.

[illegible]ious fact about houses that have gone out of fashion is that, when they become so ancient as to practically stand distinguished, they are apt to have a special value for vicious purposes. It is a quarter of a century since wooden constructions were allowed, and one of them remaining in the crowded section is a landmark. The unfamiliar visitor, or the inebriated familiar, may forget a street number or be unable to pick out a particular building in a row of licknesses, but a wooden front is unique, especially if it be also obsolete in shape. We have had a good specimen on each side of the city. Gotham cottage has just been demolished in the Bowery. It was a sizeable tavern forty years ago, standing a little back from the flowery road that is now the thoroughfare of cheap hurly-burly. High brick stores crowded partly in front of it, leaving it accessible through an aperture in the new sidewalk line; and this was profitable until the police were forced to withdraw their protection from gambling houses for the Gotham cottage was a self-advertised den of roulette, faro and keno. No church or theatre was more firmly fixed in the memory of passers by. The other wooden instance is in Sixth avenue, where the Knickerbocker cottage is prostituted from its original uses of a semi-rural hotel to the occupancy of gamblers. Here, too, solid brick and mortar houses hide some of the old frontage of pine boards, but the semblance of a genuine Knickerbocker inn is still in sight from the street. This is what we call a sporting house. Its gambling rooms are not accessible to strangers, but they can be got into by a little patience in satisfying the sentries that the intentions of the invader really are dishonorable. The Knickerbocker is in print this week as the place where Abe Ament, a professioner gambler in charge, was stabb[illegible] a waiter.

IT WAS [illegible] KNICKERBOCKER,

not long a[illegible] an ambitious bartender came to g[illegible] through the guile of a secret foe. His name was Dan, and he was hired for a month on trial. Now, it seems to be an essential accomplishment in the truly artistic barkeeper that he shall memorize the tipples of his regular customers, so that he can put forth the right bottle every time without having it mentioned. That is regarded as a sure means of capturing the conceit of a man, since it implies a careful study of his taste, and no employer will long tolerate a bunderer in this regard. Dan had no sooner been ensconced behind the Knickerbocker bar than a gambler known as the Dolpher, a dandy in dress and a prodigal in expenditures, presented himself as the secret agent of Dan's mortal enemy's vengeance. The Dolpher ordered gin, drank it, and went away. Next day he came again, and said: "Same as yesterday." Dan set out the gin.

"Thunderation!" the drinker exclaimed, sputtering the gin out of his mouth, "I wanted whisky."

"You said 'the same,' and that was gin," Dan protested, scared by the presence of his boss.

"Nothing of the kind. I drank whisky."

On the third day Dan confidently proffered the whisky.

"You've a bad memory, my friend," said the Dolpher, "I never drink anything but Santa Cruz."

The proprietor was again near enough to hear something of the row. He discharged Dan at the end of the month, and only took him back on learning of the deep, dark plot. Such is the story as he told it to the noted Thirteen Club, which holds its superstition-defying suppers there.

A TRICKSTER COME TO GRIEF

[illegible] Blavatsky, the Theosoph; and nobody can [illegible] conclusively that Colonel Olcott is not [illegible] instead of her accomplice. The [illegible] has been described correctly enough, [illegible] exposure of her pretended occult [illegible] in India, as a coarse, [illegible] audacious adventuress. Olcott is a fine organization, and I used to know him when he got a living by writing honest matter for the newspapers. But he was an oddity, and full of the most ridiculous theories and projects. In the earlier days of the Daily Graphic, when it was boomed by such ulterior freaks as the trans-Atlantic balloon foolery, and went in for queer sensationalism generally. Olcott was a contributor to its columns. During a visit to Vermont he chanced upon a seance in spiritualism given by a family named Eddy, who produced apparitions of the dead. He suggested them to the Graphic folks as available material with which to force public attention, and he was detailed to write them up. He did it fully and persistently, with captious pictures; and the strange quality of the matter was that, instead of discrediting the genuineness of the manifestations, as most reporters would have done, by inuendo if not in positive denunciation, he took the bold ground that all was honest and irrefutable. The desired interest was aroused, and the phenomena of spiritual materialization became common all over the world. The Eddy brothers quarreled among themselves, but managed to get a good farm apiece out of their invention. To the end Olcott stoutly maintained in personal conversation that he was a firm believer.

I happened to be present at the reception by a showman of a party of East Indian jugglers whom he had imported for a tour of the United States. They included snake charmers, of the kind whom travelers had described as capable of luring serpents at will from the jungles until a writhing mass of the creatures were gathered, and necromancers who could do the famous basket feat, accounts of which have so often asserted that a human being was crowded into a wicker basket, stabbed through and through with a sword until the blood flowed, overflowed the ground, and finally restored unharmed. The importer of these Asiatics had taken pains to bring those reputed to be the cleverest, and he was full of hope for the enterprise, but alas! the performance fell so far below the promise that he never so much as moved them out of New York, save to send them home again.

THE SNAKE CHARMING

amounted to a simple handling of the vipers, as is done in every dime museum in the land. The awful basket feat, at which we were prepared to shudder and faint, was so clumsy that all of us except the manager laughed at it. The enclosed boy seems so small and the basket so big that the inmate could easily curl round a central space, into which the sword was carefully and harmlessly jabbed. The trick was so transparent that the boys wouldn't have stood it in a circus side show. So much for the enchantment that distance lends to the view of the marvelous.

One of the company who thus saw the falsity of the East Indian jugglery stories demonstrated was Madam Blavatsky. I recollect that she said, when somebody remarked that the people of India were humbugs: "O, no; it strikes me that they are the humbugged for it is certain that they believe these very feats to be supernatural." I have no manner of doubt that the woman then and there conceived the scheme of going to the Orient and practicing upon the credulity and superstition of the natives. She soon announced that she was making a profound study of eastern mystics. Then she and Olcott organized the Theosophic society, transferred it to India, and, until the exposure of Blavatsky's tricks of magic, reaped a rich harvest.

It is easy for some minds to be humbugged by frauds which they desire to believe genuine. There is in New York just now an astrologer who thrives amazingly on the sale of a talisman to keep off the marks of time. His ostensible trade is to tell fortunes, and he advertises in the usual manner. His customers are mostly women, of course, and to each he casually remarks, after the horoscope has been duly cast, "I suppose you will not credit it, but, owing to the peculiar relative positions of the planets at the time of your birth, I could make a charm for you to wear that would prevent you from growing old in appearance. I would warrant it to keep you just as youthful as you are now for ten years at least." He affects to be surprised when the dupe expresses a desire to procure the wonder, but he reluctantly consents to manufacture it for her, and his price ranges as high as $50 in case he thinks she can pay so much. What she gets is a stone to wear under her corsage.

OVERDOING THE MATTER.

The Knights of Labor Injuring Themselves by Boycotting a Union Firm.

Special Telegram to The Star.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—About 2,000 workmen will be thrown out of employment tomorrow by the stoppage of work in the cigar factories of Stratton & Storm. The firm has had no trouble with its employes for more than a year and its shop was recently organized in due form as a union shop, but the boycott put on its cigars nearly a year ago has not been taken off. It is especially in force in the great labor town of Lynn. Geo. Storm recently addressed the leading union men at work in his factories, members, he says, of both the International and Progressive union, asking them if they knew why the boycott was continued. He says that they were as much in the dark and that they would try and find out. As they did not succeed, the firm, so Jno. Straiton said last night, determined to find out by forcing its employes to take a personal interest in the matter. "Our men must find out why they are being punished by their own friends," Mr. John Straiton said last night: "We pay the highest wages going and employ only union men. We can afford to suspend work now for we have a large stock on hand, but we would not suspend if we were not boycotted. The suspension will probably continue only a few weeks, but it will be longer if we do not get some good reason for the boycotting. If the Knights of Labor are at the bottom of it, we would like to know it, and also why they are harming their fellow workmen. It has been suggested that competing manufacturers may be the cause of the trouble. I do not believe it. Adolph Shasser, president of the International Union, published a card not long ago lamenting that we were still boycotted."

Vincent Woytiseka, formerly secretary of the Progressive Cigarmakers' Union, said that many of the members of that union were Knights of Labor, and that at their instance the Knights of Labor had taken up the original boycott. This action had never been reversed

An Old Man Marries a Young Girl and Immediately Loses His Mind.

Special Telegram to The Star.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14.—Wm. Taylor, a middle aged farmer of Salisbury, Md., was married last Wednesday to a Miss Dawson, a very pretty girl of 18 years, living near the same town. The wedding caused a good deal of comment at the time on account of the disparity in the years of the contracting parties. The bride and groom stopped in Salisbury Wednesday, intending to go north Thursday. When he got up Thursday morning Taylor showed signs of derangement, and yesterday became positively insane, drawing a revolver and threatening to kill his wife and a stable keeper who refused to give him the free use of a team. The town constable could not arrest him, and he had to summon several citizens as a posse to assist. Taylor is now in jail and his wife is prostrated with grief. Physicians say that he is wholly insane, and have recommended that he be placed in an asylum.

A Crisis Coming in Mexico.

LAMPASAS, Mex., Nov. 14.—The difficulties between the state and federal governments will no doubt come to a crisis within a few days. It is now believed that General Namanariar was called to the city of Mexico by the federal government. The governor of this state has secured leave of absence to go to the city of Mexico on public business. Trouble is looked for in Monterey next Monday.

He Swallowed Arsenic.

A man named Morehead, who was formerly connected with an illustrated paper of this city, swallowed a dose of arsenic with suicidal intent last night. He was taken to police headquarters, where he was soon relieved and sent on his way rejoicing. Before taking the arsenic he wrote a pathetic letter, in which he charged his wife with being the cause of his death. He forgave all his enemies and then took the poison.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 14.—A week ago there came to this city a man named James Calkins, who claimed that he was the proprietor of an extensive ax handle and hickory shop near Bethany, and that he had come to this city on a tour of collection. After having gathered in about $1,100 he started to paint the town. He showed up the next morning with a bad eye, and reported at police headquarters that he had been sand-bagged and robbed of all his money. The authorities promised to look into the matter. Calkins at once disappeared from the surface and has not been seen since. Yesterday, two citizens of Bethany arrived in St. Joe in search of a man named Jas. Garton, a young farmer. Their statement is that Calkins and Garton left their place together nine days ago, and as neither of them has shown up they suspect foul play. They say that Calkins does not own a dollar's worth of property, but eked out an existence by shaving axe handles, while Garton, who has a good deal of timber on his land, deals largely in hooppoles. The two came to St. Joe to dispose of their wares and sold out to the coopers and grocers. This fact coupled with Calkins's queer actions and story and the fact that both men are missing, gives the opinion that Garton has been made away with and has caused a great deal of excitement at Bethany.

Thieving Indians.

Special Telegram to The Star.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 14.—Reports received at military headquarters in this city yesterday, show that the Piegans are out again on a thieving expedition in Wyoming, but as yet no depredations beyond stealing some horses have been committed. They are well armed and have driven several whites from their path. They will be looked after by the military and brought back to the reservation.

MORE ON THE SAME SUBJECT.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 14.—Reports received at army headquarters states that Piegan Indians are off their reservations in Wyoming on another marauding tour. Chas. Cottrell, a ranchman, encountered a half dozen mounted Piegans on Bridge creek near Big Timber, and was driven back by a volley from their rifles. They attempted further pursuit, and it is believed these fellows were outposts from a big band of hostiles near by. General Howard has given discretionary orders to the commander at Fort McKinney in suppressing the violation of the game preserve laws in Yellowstone park. Many arrests have been made, but the penalty is only a small fine and has no terror to the poachers.

A Doctor in Jail.

JOPLIN, Mo., Nov. 14.—Dr. A. C. Lyngar, of Opolis, was brought before 'Squire Mitchell at Pittsburg, Kas., a few days ago, charged with a deadly assault on E. R. Vermillion, on the 4th of July last, and was bound over to the district court. R. E. Vermillion was tried on the charge at the last term of the circuit court of this county and was found guilty, but the lowest penalty of the law was assessed against him, and he is now serving out a fine in our jail. The trouble grew out of an affair wherein a woman was concerned. Both parties live at Opolis, Lyngar in Missouri, and Vermillion in Kansas, the town being located in both states, and are both well known citizens. The fight occurred on the line of the two states and the matter has been brought up several times before in the court, but each time dismissed on grounds of the justice not having jurisdiction.

WHITEHALL, Ill., Nov. 14.—Yesterday Ellery Bowman, who was horsewhipped Monday by A. Mylinger at school, was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Mr. Mylinger, charging the defendant with attempting to commit a criminal assault upon his 16-year-old girl. The defendant was taken before Esquire J. C. Winters and bound over in a bond of $500 for his appearance at the preliminary examination set for trial at 1:30 p. m. A change of venue was taken to Esquire Brewster, who heard the preliminary examination in Union hall, Judge Henderson and Thomas Henshaw appearing for the defense. After a very exciting trial, in which the testimony of the girl and a letter written by her to another party was sifted, the court discharged the defendant. The most intense excitement prevails and the end of this scandal is not yet reached.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 14.—Last evening while Jno. C. Coffey, an attorney-at-law living on the Detroit street road, a few miles out of the city, was singing with his family in the sitting room of their house, a shot was heard from the outside and a bullet crashed through the window, lodging in his back between the shoulder blades. The wound is a serious one and may result fatally. This is the second attempt to assassinate Coffey. A week ago someone fired at him through the same window, but the bullet missed its mark and lodged in the wall. Neither the wounded man, his family or friends have any idea who the perpetrator of the outrage can be and the police are baffled. It is thought that some person has a grudge against Coffey and has sought his life in this way.

VINCENNES, Ind., Nov. 14.—Christian Baker, a prominent merchant of Freelandsville, this county, was yesterday morning brought down to the city and lodged in jail for a brutal assault upon Anna Cardinal, an 11 year old orphan. He lured her to the woods where he accomplished his designs. Baker is in fair circumstances, has a wife and five daughters and sons, is about 60 years old, was formerly justice of the peace of the township, has resided at Freelandsville for many years, and was prominently known through this section of the state. A great sensation prevails over the affair.

OMAHA, Nov. 14.—An inquest was held yesterday upon the remains of Chas. Leslie, who was shot a few days ago at Florence by R. S. Powell, and who died late Thursday night. The coroner's verdict is that the shooting is unwarranted and unjustifiable. Powell is in jail in Omaha, having given himself up immediately after the shooting, claiming he did it in self-defense; but the evidence does not seem to sustain his statement. Leslie claimed that Powell had circulated slanderous stories about his mother and sister and he had threatened to get even with him, and Powell maintains that he defended himself against assault from Leslie and two of his companions.

The man who did the shooting escaped and his appearance answered the description of Boyd, who has been away from Omaha for some little time, returning here a day or two ago. The prisoner refuses to say anything, but the Denver sheriff is positive he is the right man.

RIEL'S FATE FIXED.

The Death Warrant Issued—His Relatives and Friends Heartbroken.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 14.—The Mail has the following special from Winnipeg, dated Nov. 13: A special messenger passed Port Arthur this afternoon, on the way to Regina, bearing the governor-general's warrant for execution of Riel at Regina Monday next. He will reach Regina Sunday morning. All preparations for the execution have been completed. Riel was made aware some days ago the sentence of the court would be carried into effect Monday. It may be well to add that none of the alleged interviews said to have been held with him lately ever took place and that correspondents of certain American and Canadian papers have been running bogus news out for weeks back. Riel's relations and friends at St. Vital, five miles from here, know that Monday will end all. They are naturally very much broken down. His poor old mother became crazed some months ago during the rebellion, so that to-day she is unable to realize the dreadful position in which her son is placed. Joseph, his brother, who is a most respectable man, is in a dreadful state of mind. Riel's wife, whom he did not treat well during the rebellion, leaving her exposed to danger and hunger, is reported to be nearly heartbroken, but priests are with her, and other relatives, and everything that can be done to comfort them will be done. Riel's family have from the first scouted the idea that the prisoner was insane. They say he had delusions on religion and on the subject of his own importance, but on all other matters he was not only sane but exceedingly intelligent and clever. They have been deeply pained at the publication of the bogus interviews.

A CALL FOR ARMS.

The State Weapons Used by the Police Force to be Sent to Jefferson City.

An ordinance was introduced in the council last night appropriating $1,000 to be used in purchasing firearms for the metropolitan police force. This step has become necessary on account of the action of the adjutant general of the state, who threatens to bring suit against the city's bondsmen unless certain firearms are accounted for at once.

While Jesse James and his gang were terrorizing the citizens of Missouri, a large number of revolvers belonging to the state were sent to the police commissioners of this city. These weapons were distributed among persons who could be relied upon to assist the authorities in hunting the bandits, whenever a call was made upon them. After the death of Jesse James and the surrender of his brother, the commissioners began gathering in the revolvers with the view of returning them to the state arsenal.

At that time the police force was poorly and inefficiently armed. Each officer furnished his own revolver, and as a result every conceivable kind of weapon peeped out from under the uniform coat of the officers. A few were wearing 22-calibre revolvers, while others had weapons that were dangerous only to the wearer. The commissioners determined to give bond for the return of the weapons, and the force was then uniformly armed with Colt's revolvers.

About six months ago the adjutant-general wrote for a list of the state arms held in this city. The clerk forwarded the numbers of those which could be reached handily. The adjutant general wrote back that fifty-six weapons were missing and must be accounted for. Since then he has threatened to bring suit against the city's bondsmen. So the commissioners have determined to return all the weapons that can be collected, pay for those missing and furnish the force with arms at the expense of the city.

WESTPORT CABLE.

An Application Made to the Council for a Franchise for This Road.

An application was made to the city council last night for a cable franchise on the route of the Westport road as far south as Twenty-third street. The request for a franchise was limited to that portion of the line between Fourth street and the old city limits; not because it is the intention of the company to build only between those two points, but because Mr. Holmes, the president, already has the right of way over the line between the old city limits and Westport. Mr. Holmes owned the Westport road between Twenty-third street and Westport years ago and when he sold it to the county he reserved the right to construct on it a street railway at any time during the next fifty years. This period has not yet expired and it is under this provision of the sale of the road that Mr. Walton Holmes now owns the right of way. It is the intention of the company to build the road to Westport but is probable that the north end will be built and operated first.

Mrs. Boggs wants the child, and Mr. Boggs is bringing forward evidence to show that his former companion is a woman of bad character, associating with men, maintaining criminal relations, etc., going to prove that she is not a proper person to have charge of the child. The case will probably be concluded to-day.

Mining Men Worried.

BUTTE, M. T., Nov. 14.—Land Commissioner Sparks's recent ruling in reference to cutting timber upon the public lands for mining uses has caused intense excitement throughout Montana. It is alleged that if enforced it will close up the mines and force smelters to shut down. It practically shuts miners and mining companies out from timber and will compel thousands to leave the country. The laws do not permit any one to acquire title to timber lands or to purchase timber. Petitions are being signed in every camp in the territory for an abrogation of the order and a committee of prominent mining men will take the petitions to Washington and more fully present the claims of the miners.

HOPKINSVILLE, Ky., Nov. 14.—Yesterday morning at 7:30 a terrible explosion occurred by the blowing up of an immense boiler in the large flouring mill of F. J. Brownell. Three persons were killed outright. John H. Brinning, head miller, was scalded to death and his body horribly mangled. He was about 43 years of age and came to this city from Cincinnati. In the capacity of a miller he proved to be an efficient and a skillful mechanic. His remains were last evening forwarded to Detroit, Mich., where he has a daughter living. Nelson Metcalfe, fireman, was torn to pieces, his entire back being gone. George Warling, a youth of 14, was killed outright. He had, a few seconds previous to the explosion, brought his father's breakfast and was standing in front of the engine when the crash came, and was dashed to death. His father, Frank Warling, the engineer, sustained a painful fracture of the skull by the flying debris and his escape from sudden death was a miracle. The boiler flew over his head and carried destruction in its wake. The roof and walls of the boiler room were completely demolished. Heavy pieces of iron were hurled in every conceivable direction, but no one was injured. The loss to F. J. Brownell by the explosion sums up several thousand dollars.

Ruinous Prairie Fires.

Special Telegram to The Star.

VINITA, I. T., Nov. 14.—Never has there been so much of the range of this country destroyed by fire as this season. For miles and miles in every direction a man may travel and find no grass whatever, and the outlook for wintering cattle is very discouraging indeed. In addition to this, a very large amount of hay which has been put up has been destroyed, which also makes the situation doubly unpleasant. The losses of houses, fences and fields of corn have been reported almost daily for some weeks. The opinion is frequently expressed that the starting of prairie fires is the work of an organized band, but the absence of a cause for such proceedings makes this theory improbable. Cattlemen are thus placed in a serious predictament, and large losses of stock are sure to be the result.

A Hunter's Accidental Death.

Special Telegram to The Star.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 14.—Information has just reached here of the accidental death of Stephen Heaton while hunting on the Dolores river in the county of that name. He was last seen alive on Thursday of last week and on the day following his body was found lying on a ledge near the river. His rifle had evidently been discharged while trailing it, the ball entering the groin and passing out of the left shoulder. One of his sons was killed in a fight between cattlemen and Utes in 1881. He has a married daughter living at Lincoln, Neb.

Accident to a Steamer.

HENDERSON, Ky., Nov. 14.—The steamer Will S. Hays, while attempting to pass under the bridge yesterday morning, met with a serious accident. Measurements were taken of the distance from the bridge to the water, being about eighty-five feet, and there was supposed to be ample room to pass under the bridge, but her chimneys reached too high by several feet and one was torn entirely off, falling across the texas, crushing in a portion of the roof. The other was broken off about six feet from the top. The damage will reach about $2,000. No one injured.

An Unknown Man Found Dead.

Special Telegram to The Star.

GREELEY, Col., Nov. 14.—A sheep herder, name unknown, was found dead upon the prairie two miles north of here Thursday. It is supposed that he perished in the recent snow storm. The coroner went out and buried the body where it was found. He had been employed as a sheep herder about a month and had positively refused to give his employer any name, saying only that he was from California. He was of middle age and apparently well educated.

King Milan's Excuse.

VIENNA, Nov. 14.—A dispatch from Sofia received here this morning, officially announces that Servia has declared against Bulgaria. The dispatch further states tat King Milan has issued a manifesto declaring that Bulgarians have taken the initiative in crossing the Servian border and attacking Servians at Vlasina. He feels that peace can no longer maintained and accepts this action on the part of Bulgaria as a declaration of war. King William took command of the Servian forces in person at 6 o'clock this morning and large bodies of troops are now moving forward on their way to the Bulgarian frontier. The men display great enthusiasm.

A Brutal Murder By Moonlighters.

DUBLIN, Nov. 14.—A band of moonlighters attacked the house of one Curtin, a farmer living at Malohafft, near Fralee. When the attack was made Curtin opened a vigorous fire on the marauders and drove them off, but they soon returned to the attack, captured the house and brutally murdered Curtin. His body was riddled with bulletts and his servant, named Sullivan, was badly wounded. The police have arrested eight persons whom they charge with complicity in the outrage.

The father of the boy, Frank Werling, sustained severe injuries about the head by flying debris. The boiler room was completely demolished.

Fire Record.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 14.—The village of Austin, seven miles from this city, was visited by a destructive fire early this morning, which entirely consumed the Giles block, which contains a hotel and several stores. The people in the hotel had a narrow escape from death, being compelled to flee in their night clothes. Loss, probably $60,000 with but small insurance.

Killed by Machinery.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 14.—While Lizzie D. Poke, aged 12 years, was at work in Smith's mill on Pine street this morning, her hair was caught in the shafting of the machinery. Her body was picked up and whirled around with terrible rapidity, and when the machinery was stopped and her mangled form extricated she was dead.

THE TURNER EXAMINATION.

What the Neighbors Saw the Day of the Murder—Chief Speers on the Stand.

The preliminary examination of Thomas Turner for the murder of Mrs. Conway, was again taken up in Justice Teasdale's office at 1:40 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Woodson read from the notes a portion of Turner's testimony before the coroner's jury, being in relation to what he had done the afternoon of the murder. There was nothing new in this.

Alice Rector, a colored woman, said she was working for Mrs. Willhite, Tenth and Cherry streets as cook on the day of the murder. Saw Turner between 10 and 11 o'clock the day of the murder. On cross-examination the witness said she noticed on Tuesday morning that he was shaved and had on a short coat and the same pants as at the trial.

Her mother, Mrs. Craft, followed and said she lived with her daughter on Lydia avenue. She saw Turner on Tuesday. In other respects her testimony substantiated that of her daughter.

Andrew McIntire, a carpenter residing at Fourteenth and Lydia avenue, testified he had known Turner quite a while. He saw him Tuesday afternoon, and saw that he was shaved.

Mr. A. Veering was called by the state, and said that he keeps a grocery store at Twelfth and Oak streets. Turner visited his store twice on the day of the murder, at 11:30 o'clock in the morning and again in the evening.

Mr. Willis Steele, who was one of the jurors at the coroner's inquest, was called to the stand and said that when Turner was before the jury he said that he did use a weight to his hitching strap; also that when he went in and picked up his can he noticed that the door was closed. That the jury then went out and found that the door could not be seen from where the cans were placed. On cross-examination he said that in his judgment the last can was about twelve feet from the door.

Mrs. Hettie Keiller, who lives at 918 Cherry street, said she knew Turner, the milkman. Turner delivered milk at her home. On the Sunday following the murder she had a conversation with him in reference to the murder. In that house Turner remarked about the quietnesss which prevailed at the house when he called on the morning of the day of the murder. That he noticed that no one was around, "not even the little girl." That he talked very freely and like any innocent man might talk.

Chief Speers said he called at the house about 2 o'clock of the day of the murder and found the bodies still warm. He described the condition of the house and bodies. He had a talk with Turner the night of the murder, about 7 o'clock in the evening. This statement made by Turner has been published before, and was given over in substance. It is what Turner did in going in, getting his cans, going over his route, the time, etc. In this statement Turner said that he was shaved on the morning of that day. He also stated that he saw nobody about the house. The chief stated that he examined Turner's clothes and found no blood stains. At this examination Captain Ditsch was also present. The examination lasted a half hour and during that time Turner was quiet and the questions were answered frankly.

After describing the fearful view that met his eye, he told what had been done, and mentioned the finding of the coupling pin by Officer Church. He said by microscopical examination blood and hair could be seen on it.

The state here rested its case.

Mrs. Christine Essler, the first witness called, said she lived at 1326 Lydia avenue. She has known Mr. Turner ever since his coming from Chillicothe, when he went to trading with her. He has delivered milk at her house at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon. She saw Turner on Monday afternoon before the murder. He left his horse there to deliver milk in the neighborhood. He never used a hitching weight.

Mr. Thomas Moody was the next witness called by the defense. On the day of the murder he was boarding at Fourteenth and Grand avenue. He met Turner before the Palace restaurant about 12:30 o'clock. Never saw him hitch his horse. When he had a beard it was one and one half inches long.

The last witness examined was Mrs. Emma Bond, who lives at 1416 East Fourteenth street. Her evidence was unimportant and at its conclusion the case was continued until next Wednesday.

SERVIA DECLARES WAR.

Special Telegram to The Star.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The Balkan business has again leaped to the lead of public questions. This is due to the reception in London last night of news that Servia has declared war on Bulgaria. The report is based on a telegram from Belgrade to the effect that the Servian government has informed M. Rangabed, the acting Servian agent in Bulgaria, that in consequence of the unjustifiable attack on the Servians and the invasions of Servian territory by Bulgarians, Servia has decided to declare war against Bulgaria.

The Russian government has stopped the subvention of 150,000 roubles to Prince Alexander. The News says the prospects of success of the Balkan conference are regarded at Berlin as extremely precarious.

The same privileges would be granted to England and the United States.

The Olathe Scandal.

To the Editor of The Star.

Your correspondent at this place, who saw fit to pander to the morbid cravings of an overwrought community by writing up the scandal connected with the late management of the deaf and dumb institution located here, drew largely upon his imagination in order to lend more gusto to his article. It is not my desire to vindicate the executive portion of the department, for I am perfectly well satisfied from my own late connection with that there was gross mismanagement and immorality connected with it. The statement that the Police Gazette was read occasionally by some of the girls is true. One of the domestics frequently brought a copy into the building and left it where it was picked up by the girls, if not actually handed to them.

The teachers repeatedly warned them against such a baneful practice, and, on several occasions got hold of and destroyed such papers.

In vindication of the lady teachers from the charge made that they were "so lax in their management and so careless in their conduct that they set bad examples to the easily influenced girls under their care," I must say that such a charge is utterly false and criminal in its nature, and should not go unrebuked. During the two terms in which the writer was connected with the institution in the capacity of teacher no one possessed better facilities for observing their every day conduct, and I can say without the least hesitancy, that never on a single occasion did I observe anything pass between them that could not be considered strictly within the bounds of propriety and decorum. I am ready to testify to the fact that they very frequently gave vent to expressions of aborrhence and disgust at the way the executive department was being run. Being subordinates, and threatened with summary dismissal from their positions if they did not attend strictly to their own business, they had no other course to follow than that of a semi-suppressed disgust. It is not within the province of this communication to go into detail over matters, yet it may, from present indications, become necessary to do so, and then the pnblic will have a clearer and better understanding of the internal workings of such an institution, which, though properly elemosynary, is not, as the writer of that sensational communication terms it, an institution of "indigent" deaf mutes.

The statement that several of the female pupils had to be taken to their homes in order to cover up their shame, is also untrue. Yet such does not release the management from the charge that gross immorality was practiced—most assuredly not by any of the teachers. This matter of guilt in the case of May Kelly, now in controversy, will, when thoroughly investigated, doubtless place the guilt where it belongs and until then speculation is needless. Your correspondent alludes to the "big institution" which is undoubtedly true and it should form a subject for the serious consideration of the state authorities as to the impropriety of enlarging it. There is danger of it growing to such proportions that its successful management will be problematical. The next move should be to erect another institution building nearer the center of the state. New York state now has eight such buildings within different parts of her borders, and why should not Kansas follow suit?

PAYING THE PENALTY.

THREE MURDERERS HANGED TO-DAY.

The Notorious Italians End their Existence on the Scaffold—Preliminary Work of the Day—The Drop Falls—One Dies a Hard Death—A History of the Crime.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Gilardo, Azzaro and Sylvestri, the three Italian murderers who are to hang at noon to-day for the murder of their fellow countryman, Fillipo Caruso, passed a quiet night. They slept until daybreak, when they all arose, and lighting their cigarrettes kept up an animated conversation with each other until a little after 8 o'clock, when their breakfast, consisting of oysters, fish and potatoes fried in oil, veal cutlets, coffee and toast, was brought them. They ate with seeming relish. After they had finished Father Moretti arrived and mass was celebrated. As early as 9 o'clock a. m. there was a large crowd assembled in the vicinity of the county jail.

HISTORY OF THE CRIME.

The crime of which the men were convicted is known as the "Italian trunk mystery," and is one of the most atrocious that ever occured in Chicago.

Caruso was 20 years of age, a native of Sicily, and by occupation a lemon peddler. He lived with an elder brother, Franciscа, at 75 Tilden avenue, in a room on the top floor. Filippo was industrious, and his savings, amounted to several hundreds of dallars, it was his custom to carry concealed about his clothing. This momey tempted the cupidity of Giovinni Azzaro. He concocted a plan to strangle Caruso for his money, and induced Augustino Gilardo and Agnozzio Sylvestri to assist in the murder. The conspirators all came from the same province in Italy where Caruso was born, and lived together in a room in the upper floor of 94 Tiden avenue. This apartment was almost bare. A chair or two comprised the furniture. Some damp straw served as beds. There were five of these heaps, the two extra bunks being for the use of Antonio Mercuria and Ignazzio Bove, also Sicilians. The two last named overheard the conspirators planning the murder and knew that the crime was to be committed. They said nothing, but refused to take any active part in the killing.

Thursday, April 30.—Caruso left his home about 8 o'clock in the morning and visited his countrymen at 94 Tilden avenue. He was seen going up-stairs by a 12-year-old child, named Mamie Moran, whose parents lived in the apartments below. When he entered the room the three men who were to take his life were present. Gilardo greeted him pleasantly, and asked him to sit down. Gilardo was stropping a razor, The Italians have a custom of shaving each other in turn. Gilardo, after sharpening his razor, asked Caruso to shave him. Caruso did this and then took Gilardo's place to be shaved. Caruso sat well back in the chair, elevated his feet, and allowed his head to fall back so that the operation of shaving could be readily done. Gilardo made a thick lather, which he spread up and down the throat of his unsuspecting victim. Stealthily reaching for a stout cord made into a noose, he dexterously let it fall over Caruso's head. Instant-Azzaro bounded from his seat and seized hold of one end of the cord, while Sylvestri snatched the other end. Gilardo, with both hands, held Caraso's mouth shut, preventing any outcry. Azzarro and Sylvestri with all their strength jerked the noose tight. Caruso's eyes started from their sockets. The cord cut into his neck. Ip a minute he was dead. Two days later the boy horribly discolored, was found in a trunk at Pittsburg. The fatal noose was about the neck. The remains were rapidly decomposing. It was the odor from the trunk that first aroused suspicion. A baggageman employed in the Pittsburg & Fort Wayne depot broke open the trunk. Investigation showed that the trunk had been shipped over that road from Chicago, and when the dead man's clothing was searched a money order dated at Chicago, was found payable to Filippo Caruso, the amount being $25.04. A receipt for this money order was found at the post office there, the number being 90,910, which showed that Caruso was living at 267 Milwaukee avenue. The house was raided and six Italians arrested. One of them, Andrea Rosso, a money-lender, said he got a money order made out in Caruso's name from Gilardo, who was then on his way back to Italy. Gilardo was found hiding at 145 Wooster street in New York, and when brought back to Chicago was identified as the man who had the trunk checked at the Fort Wayne depot here for Pittsburg. L. T. Ryder, of 56 Rebecca street, owns the house on Tilden avenue in which the Caruso brothers lived. He called there the Sunday after the murder and found a number of Italians present, one of whom was translatlating from a newspaper the account of the discovery of the body, while Francisca was tearing out his hair by the roots and lamenting the death of his brother. When the police learned of this they had their first clew. Francisca thought his brother might have paid a visit to Azzaro and his friends. It was discovered that on the day Caruso was last seen a trunk was carried down the stairs at 94 Tilden avenue. The police concluded that the murder had been committed by the Italians upstairs and arrested the lot. Mercurio was the first to break down. He implicated Azzaro, Gilardo, and Sylvestri, but protested that neither himself nor Bove had anything to do with the crime. Presently the three principals began to talk. Each shouted to put the blame on the others. At length they broke down and confessed to all. Their admissions were used as evidence at the trail Gilardo's confession was a dramatic recital. He said that when Caruso was dead they did not know what to do with the body. Azzaro suggested the trunk, and sent Gilardo and Sylvestri after it, While they were gone he rifled the dead man's pockets, but when the others returned told them Caruso had no money. Azzaro kept all the money himself and he and Gilardo carried the trunk with the dreadful burden to the depot. Gilardo brought the ticket, and then, on Azzaro's advice, fled to New York. The trial is of too recent date to be forgotten. The assassins had no defense. Mercurio and Bove were acquitted of the charge of being accessories, as it was shown they were forced to keep quiet through fear of others. Judge Hawes, who inflicted the death penalty, refused to entertain a motion for a new trial, and a bill of exceptions filed by counsel was also overruled.

ON THE SCAFFOLD.

The three men appeared on the scaffold at 12 o'clock, and at 10:12 p. m. the drop fell.

The execution of Azaro, Sylvestri and Gilardo took place at noon to-day in the county jail. The drop fell at precisely 12:09 o'clock. There was no delay in carrying out the programme previously arranged and the carrying out of the extreme penalty of the law was done in a fitting manner.

At 11 o'clock representatives of the press waiting in the main office were allowed to take seats in front of the gallows. With the reporters came a number of Italian residents of the city, several county and city officials, making in all a crowd of about 50. The scaffold was painted black. From the beam overhead depended three ropes, with which it was intended to choke the guilty wretches. The ends of all the ropes rested on chairs placed directly over as many traps. Back of these chairs, at a distance of about ten feet, was an oblong structure about twice the size of a big dry goods box, in which was stationed the man whose duty it was to spring the trap. Fresh accessions were added to the crowd until it numbered fully 300. At 11:45 the condemned men, with their spiritual advisory, were taken to the jail library, where the death warrant was read. At this formality had been accomplished and the march to the scaffold begun. On arriving at the spot of execution the condemned men were at once placed in proper position at the trap, side by side. Gilardo maintained especially a brave demeanor, as did Sylvestor; but Azar kept his eyes closed and was apparently on the verge of breaking down. They all repeated in Italian prayers for the dying, as first pronounced by the priests. After the prayers were finished Jailor Foltzy adjusted white caps, and shrouds were quickly placed on the men, after the noose had been placed about their necks. A very few moments later the pre-arranged signal was given and the trap sprung at exactly 1:20. It was all over for Sylvestri and Gilardo at once, their necks being broken in the fall. A more fearful death was decreed for Azzaro. The noose slipped when the rope stretched and the knot lodged under his chin. The poor wretch drew up his legs, a shudder ran through his frame and his convulsive struggles were terrific to see. He was slowly strangled. The crowd pressed forward. Medical men surrounded the quivering body while expressions of horror came from those who could see it. For fully four minutes the twitching lasted, while the gasps at longer intervals gradually ensuing between each, did not cease until 5½ minutes had elapsed. It was seven minutes before the pulse ceased to beat.

RAILROAD EXTORTION.

How it Threatens to Paralyze the Trade of a Montana City.

Special Telegram to The Star.

BUTTE, M. T., Nov. 14.—A cloud fell upon Butte yesterday when it became known that the owners of the mills for the reduction of silver ores had determined to close down their works on Jan. 1 unless the Union Pacific company should reduce the rate on salt. The salt is obtained at Salt Lake. The distance to Ogden, the shipping point, is 440 miles, and the rate $26 per ton. The mill men have long protested against this outrageous charge, but without avail, and this had led to the action of yesterday. The compact includes the Alice, the Lexington and the Moulton, and all the mills in this camp. The announcement has a depressing effect upon the camp, as it will throw at least 5,000 men out of employment—about one-third of the camp. The traffic of Butte of last year equalled one-tenth of the gross business of the Union Pacific. If the mills shut down it will rob it of two-thirds of the business. General Manager Calloway has been notified of the action of the mills.

REV. W. W. HICKS has received one cent from the Washington Star as damages for the charge made by that paper that he sold assassin GUITEAU'S body to the medical museum. It is to be hoped, if not presumed, that this will permanently retire the Rev. HICKS from public view. His connection with GUITEAU was nauseating to the public, and his interest in the assassin's future seemed to the general public only a cloak to cover a morbid desire on his own part for notoriety.

THE fact that the evening paper is first to publish all important news was fully demonstrated yesterday. A great fire broke out at Galveston in the morning, which destroyed a large portion of the city. The morning papers in late extras published Associated Press bulletins announcing that a fire was in progress, but were utterly unable to give any details which would convey anything like an accurate idea of the damage done. The evening papers of the country, however, gave an accurate description of the fire and furnished the public the first real news of the catastrophe, all of which is rehashed in this morning's papers.

MEXICO has a crisis on hand. A crisis in Mexico is nothing unusual. It generally consists of a couple of dozen ragamuffins, mounted on ramshackle old bronchos, whose sole ambition should be to find an oat or cornfield, and a ragamuffin commander, bedecked with tinsel gold lace, who issues a proclamation declaring himself dictator of all the country he happens to think of when he writes his "pronunciamento." This pronunciamento is a peppery declaration of what the author means to do in a military way toward subverting the powers that be and substituting a government of his own. The would-be CÆSAR does not, like our own communist, wish to throw everything into chaos and see who will come out on top. This genial gentleman merely wants to change one despotism for another. This time the trouble is between the state government of Bustamente and the central power at the City of Mexico. The governor of the state seems to be pursuing a milder course than is common in that cactus-covered nation. He even condescends to consult the national authority on the subject. So mild a revolutionist can never hope to gain a following. The usual style is to issue your pronunciamento, gather up a gang of horse-thieves, rob a few old rancheros, and then take to the woods or mountains, whichever are most convenient, and stay there until starved out and die on the scaffold, shouting "Viva la libertad," to encourage other fools to do likewise. On second thought we think the present will prove a very mild "crisis."

THE boycotters in New York have rather overdone the thing, in one case at least, as our telegraph columns to-day show. About a year ago one of the largest cigar firms in the city was boycotted by both the cigar markers' unions because they employed non-union labor. The result of the boycott was they were compelled to discharge their non-union men and employ union men, and this they did. When they did this they naturally expected to see the embargo removed and business go on as usual. They were mistaken, however, as the engine seemed to be more powerful than its operators and those who set it in motion were unable to stop it. Notwithstanding the fact that their terms had been agreed to, the boycott was continued, and the firm found it as difficult to sell their goods after the change as it was before. Appeals were made to the leaders of the union, but they seemed unable to end the trouble, and as a last resort the manufacturers determined to shut down altogether until matters shall right themselves, and this will be done to-day. By this action 2,000 union men are thrown out of work and the amount of money necessary to pay the wages of that number of employes will be withdrawn from active use. The only result of this will be the men who are shut out will have to suffer for the stupidity of their fellows. Almost anyone can evoke a power which he will find it impossible to curb, and it would be well for those who start the machinery of the boycott in motion for the avowed purpose of paralyzing business to find out how to stop it at the proper time, or the result will be that they will, as in this case, hurt themselves worse than any one else.

800 PER CENT INCREASE.

The immense amount of building being done in Kansas City during the close of the season which has ended weeks ago in other cities is attracting attention throughout the country. It indicates that the people of this city are in such a hurry to build that they build out of season rather than wait until spring. There must be a pressing necessity for homes when the cost of residence buildings during the week in the middle of November runs above $110,000. The increase in building for the week ending to-day over the corresponding week of last year is 800 per cent. This indicates at least a healthy growth.

KANSAS CITY AS A HOME.

Kansas City has surely reached the point at which it can be regarded as a place of residence, and not merely a trading post.

The experimental days are over. With a population of over 100,000, it is certain that there can be no retrogression. Here, at the junction of the Kaw and Missouri, there is to be a great city, the center of an enormous territory. Everybody sees this fact. Everybody is banking upon it. In each fresh sale of land, in each new business enterprise due heed is given to the prospect. The present population expects to stay here. Our merchants and manufacturers, our lawyers and doctors have no thought of pulling up stakes and moving out to some more promising field, where chances are better and profits are greater. There is no such field. That star of empire which has been steadily moving westward has reached its stopping point. There will, of course, be immense developements beyond us, but the development here will be in proportion, and the supremacy of Kansas City is assured.

It was not so a few years ago. However much men might think it and hope it, and work for it they could not then be positive of it. And with all their boasts about the city they had come to and were toiling in, they were by no means sure that their move to this place was their final one. It is not surprising, therefore, that so little has been done hitherto to make this city commodious and attractive. So long as it was considered merely as a shop for business it was enough to show that the shop paid. But the furniture and conveniences good enough for a shop do not make a pleasant and satisfactory home, and it is time now that we begin to look on Kansas City as a home. Our people up to this time have, speaking generally, been like a man dwelling in a house which he rents from month to month. Such a man does not give much thought or bestow much money on the improvement of his habitation. It seems foolish for one so uncertain of his stay to paper blank walls or plant a flower bed in the dreary little patch of yard. But let that man buy his ground and build the house in which he expects to live the rest of his days, and his neglect of these things disappears. He is quite ready to give some attention to these details of improvement as to which he was formerly so careless. The bareness and crudity of his surroundings now displease him. He does not grudge a few hours and a few dollars taken from his business to be used in the brightening and refining of his home. It is quite time that a similar change should pass over the population of this city. We are going to live here; let us make the place a pleasant one to live in.

There is no question but that hitherto we have made practically no attempt of the kind. There are some fine residences scattered here and there, but there is not a single decent civic building. There is a beautiful country around us with hill prospects and river views, but we have no public park. We could hardly expect to possess a large art gallery as yet, but we have not made the first step towards one. With a most interesting region in its geology and botany and other scientific aspects, all around us, we have no museum of natural history.

And the worst of it is that nobody seems to care. We have gotten used to the shiftless, hand-to-mouth living of the transient tenant, and do not realize that the time for that sort of thing has passed away. All that is needed is that we should wake up to the facts. Public sentiment once aroused, both individual and public action will follow. Rich men like to be popular. Let them find that popularity is waiting for the man who shall do some costly and gracious thing for the advancement of this city. There are plenty of openings, parks, libraries, museums, art galleries, fountains. We have nothing. No mistake can be made in the way of duplicating.

But we need not rely upon the generous rich man. Perhaps we had better not. The main thing wanted is that we, the hundred thousand, should pause long enough to observe, what can be very quickly seen, that we are here to stay, and that it behooves us to give a little thought and care and money to Kansas City as our Home.

Amusements.

The Thompson company, producing the "Mikado" at the Coates is making a fine reputation for itself. It is thoroughly organized and drilled and each member of the company seems to work entirely with a view of the general result. The performance is in every way a most pleasing one.

Next week the Kiralfys with "Around the World in Eighty Days," will be at the Coates.

Monday night "In the Ranks" will be given at the Gillis.

Tomorrow night the citizens of Wyandotte will be given their first taste of Sunday theatricals when "Only a Woman's Heart" will be produced by an excellent company from New York. Speaking of this delightful drama, a well known writer, who had witnessed the rehearsals, says:

'Tis "Only a Woman's Heart," not much to speak of. Poor, little insignificant thing! how often maltreated, trampled on, crushed. And yet how pure, how true and tender in its affection, how heroic in its love, how self-denying in its generosity, how strong to bear up under the vicissitudes of fortune. These various qualities of a woman's heart, together with the incidents of a story of actual occurrence, form the theme of the drama to-night.

George Smith, the author, has skillfully worked out this theme, producing a play full of strong dramatic situations, with sentiment and comedy nicely intermingled and balanced, furnishing an entertainment to please all. We follow the persecutions and sufferings of his heroine through all their phases, see her poor loving heart almost broken by the torture of a sacrifice too great to bear, and almost cry aloud with her suffering soul, "too much, too much," when lo! the happy denouement relieves the strain, and we are happy with the heroine, Hattie Salisbury, whom we have followed "Through Night to Light;" enjoying with her the reward of a noble devotion.

Though seemingly a subject so serious, it did not prevent the author from skillfully interspersing sufficient good comedy to keep his audience in constant good humor. This is undoubtedly the secret of the popularity of the play.

THE BELT LINE OPEN.

Finishing Touches Being Put on the Eighteenth Street Cut—The C. & A. to Begin Using the Line.

The finishing touches are now being put on the Belt Line railroad. The most serious difficulty in the way of the Belt's operation was the sliding bank at the Eighteenth street cut. A retaining wall ten feet thick now holds this bank in obedience to the will of the company. It is said that the Chicago & Alton Railroad company will begin operating the Belt in a few days by using it in the transportation of fast freight. The difference between the routes on the west and east sides of the city is a gain of about four hours in shipping fast freight. It takes five hours to get a stock train from the yards through the city by the old route around the bluff and only forty minutes by way of the Belt. The Belt line is said to be the most valuable franchise in the country. The route is about sixteen miles long and the right of way was secured for ninety-nine years. It is probable that every road centering in Kansas City will soon be paying for the privilege of running over the Belt rails.

An Important Decision.

A decision in the case of Mrs. Millie N. Allen vs. Matt Foster and Benjamin McLean was rendered yesterday by Judge Brewer of the United States court. In 1867 the defendants seized property owned by W. B. Allen at Seventh and Main streets, to satisfy a judgment which had been obtained against him two years previous. The property was sold under the protests of Mrs. Allen. In 1882 Mr. Allen died and the widow brought suit for the admeasurement of her dower. The defendants acknowledged that during his life Allen was seized of an indefeasible estate in the property; in fact they admitted nearly every allegation of the plaintiff, but claimed her dower was limited to the actual value of the property at the time it was sold. Mrs. Allen held that she was entitled to a one-third interest in the property during her life time and that she was entitled to the benefits which may have arisen from an increased value of the property.

Judge Brewer took the same view of the case and gave the plaintiff damages to the amount of $1,087 and $675 annually in addition.

A Handy Blue Book.

One of the most valuable books of reference yet published in this city has just been compiled by Mr. W. O. Huckett, secretary of the police board. The book is a complete directory of all the places of amusement, charitable institutions, societies, educational institutions, etc. It contains the names of all streets alphabetically arranged and gives the location of all the telephone stations in the city. A chapter is devoted to registering, voting and naturalization. All the additions, sub-divisions and resurveys of the city are given. It also contains a list of the hotels, the location and number of ticket offices in the city, and the location of depots. Public halls, public parks, etc., are clearly made known. In fact, it is one of the most useful books of information that could possibly have been compiled.

Resolutions Passed.

A meeting of soldiers who served under General McClellan was held last night at Armory hall. F. S. Snow acted as chairman, and T. J. Cook, secretary. A committee composed of Charles H. Quade, C. Carples, Joseph McArdle and Benjamin Warner was appointed to draft resolutions. The chairman read some extracts from Swinton's "Army of the Potomac." Some resolutions were then presented by the committee and adopted by the meeting.

St. Joseph's Bazar.

The bazaar now being held at Armory hall for the benefit of St. Joseph's church is nightly crowded with visitors. A musical and literary programme was presented last night and an enjoyable time was had by those present. Great interest is being taken in the candidates competing for prizes and the voting is very lively. The bazar closes to-night.

Telephone Stations.

Several weeks ago the police commissioners issued a circular in which they announced their intention of establishing 100 telephone stations in different parts of the city. The work of putting up the telephones began to-day.

Horse and Buggy Found.

A letter was received at police headquarters this morning stating that a horse and buggy had been found hitched in the road about a mile and a half from Parksville. The horse was a sorrel with four white feet.

Burglars at Work.

The city was thoroughly worked by burglars last night. The reports which came into police headquarters this morning showing that the "gang" succeeded in making a very rich haul. Already the reports show nine places were entered, with booty to the amount of $2,500 captured, and probably there are some to be heard from yet. They started the raid by breaking into a carpenter shop belonging to W. B. Everhart, on Third street, between Main and Delaware streets, capturing an assortment of drills, cold chisels and other instruments which afterwards came handy during the course of their operations.

The gang then visited East Kansas City, where the grocery store of P. J. McAvoy was entered, a safe drilled, blown open and the neat little sum of $600 captured. Close at hand is the grocery store and saloon of W. M. Mensing, so this also was visited. Besides the loose cash on hand for making change, $60 and a watch belonging to the clerk, Geo. Clark, and a shot gun belonging to B. W. Twitchel, were taken. James Lynn's saloon, in the McAvoy building, was also entered and some small change, liquors and cigars taken. This wound up the hunt in this neighborhood and the enterprising burglars hied themselves southward, and began work on the residences.

C. C. Campbell's residence was entered during the night and this morning when the occupants arose they found the doors and windows all open. On examination it was found that entrance had been effected through the basement windows. A gold watch, suits of clothing and other articles of wearing apparel and a large sum of money were stolen.

Mr. Hickman's residence at 1017 Campbell street, was visited and it was here that the best haul was made, the burglars capturing $800. Another house in the neighborhood was also entered, but nothing of particular value obtained.

A trunk belonging to P. E. Snow, was taken from the hallway of a boarding house at 715 Central street, and found broken open and rifled of its contents, in the back yard of the premises located at 308 West Eighth street. Along side of it was an axe used in doing the work.

Westport was not overlooked in the burglar's boom, for P. D. Etue, of the Live Stock Indicator, reports his residence entered. Among the articles taken from his place are a black pocket-book, a silver dollar, two quarters, and other small articles.

While on their rounds the festive burglars whiled away their time by holding up numerous citizens with varying results. A city physician reports being halted in front of the "twin cottages" by two men, one of whom held a revolver at his heart while the other went through him, succeeding in capturing a silver watch and $20 in cash.

No particular clues are left to show who the perpetrators were, but several suspicious characters have been arrested and held on various charges. Detective O'Hare and Officer McGinness this morning run in Chas. White, Nelsen McGranby and George Chouteau, lodging against them the charge of being frequenters of bawdy houses. All suspicious looking individuals will be hauled in and everything possible will be done to bring the burglars to justice. When Chief Speers began to receive the reports this morning and found the extent of the work, he exclaimed: "Why, the 'crooks' must have run an excursion train in from Chicago or St. Louis."

PREPARING TO DANCE.

The Second Annual Ball of the Telephone Employes—When and Where it Will be Held.

The Kansas City employes of the Missouri and Kansas telephone company are making extensive preparations for their second annual ball, which will be given at Music hall, Ninth and Broadway, Thursday evening, Dec. 10. It is intended to make the ball as interesting and novel as possible, and the hall will be decorated fantastically and ornamented with numerous electrical exhibits. A similar plan was adopted last year and it worked well. An electrical exhibition will be given under the direction of Professor C. W. Gandy, and some very novel inventions will be displayed. Among the number will be an electric dental mallet, a late invention which is said to be looked upon favorably by the dental fraternity. A phonograph will also be exhibited and an electrical girl will be introduced to the visitors. A branch of the central office will be established in the hall to allow visitors to see how calls are answered at headquarters. There are about sixty employes on the pay roll of the company, in Kansas City, inclusive of the eighteen lady operators at the central office. Last year the employes gave a ball and it proved such a big success that they determined to give another this winter. The programmes and tickets will be of unique but very handsome design.

Hulett's orchestra of ten pieces has been engaged for the occasion, and a well known caterer will see that the dancers do not leave the hall hungry.

HIGHWAYMEN ARRESTED.

Robbing a Victim Whom They Could Not Fleece.

Charles B. Cummings is from Kansas, and last night went around viewing the sights. He wears spectacles, and has other marks which might give the impression that his vocation in Kansas was that of "teaching young ideas how to shoot." During his rounds he fell in with William Slattery and George Roscoe. They gave him a flowery talk about making him a section boss in Nebraska, representing themselves as men holding influential positions upon the road. Cummings is not as green as he looks, however, and gave up no money on this plea. They worked a long time, but to no purpose, so, when down upon the levee, at the foot of McGee street, they called upon him to deliver. Cummings slyly dropped a pocket book and began going through his pockets, fishing out a $5 bill. They then knocked him down and skipped. Cummings picked up his pocket book, containing $18, hurried down to police headquarters and reported the matter. Officers Martin and Milton arrested Slattery and Martin and Bittel arrested Roscoe. They were taken before Judge Worthen this morning and held to wait action of the grand jury in bonds of $1,000 each.

800 PER CENT GAIN.

The Biggest Increase in Building Ever Recorded Even in Booming Kansas City.

The cost of building in Kansas City during the week ending to-day shows the greatest increase over the corresponding week of the previous year ever recorded in this or any other city in the United States. The gain over last year is 800 per cent, or in other words Kansas City has spent eight times as much money on building during the past week as it spent during the corresponding week last year. The figures are as follows:

Frame	4,075
Miscellaneous	1,090
Total	$14,165
	1885.
Brick	$ 52,575
Frame	54,175
Miscellaneous	4,860
Total	$111,610

The estimate on the building for the week ending to-day was only made up to noon today. The figures show an increase over the corresponding week of last year which is simply astounding. It is, however, only in keeping with the real estate and clearing house showings for the past few weeks.

COUNCIL MEETING.

The Westport Cable Road Ordinance in the Hands of a Committee.

The council met in special session last night and for the first time in several months the lobby was well filled with spectators. Representatives of the Westport line, ice dealers and citizens interested in the Bluff street stairway were present to watch the progress of legislation in which they were especially interested.

Soon after the council was called to order an ordinance granding the Westport company the right to construct and operate a cable road on Walnut street from Fourth to Twelfth streets, on Twelfth street from Walnut street to Grand avenue, and on Grand avenue from Twelfth to Twenty-third streets, was introduced and read. It was referred to the public improvements committee without debate. The ordinance was introduced in order to allow the present Westport Street Railway company to be converted into a cable line. The fact that the road had passed into the hands of a syndicate, and that the object of the new company was to operate a cable road, was published in THE SNAR about two weeks ago.

A resolution was introduced in reference to the action of the Hannibal company in tearing down the foot bridge leading from Bluff street to the tracks below. The resolution contained assertions that the Hannibal company was in arrears on taxes, was occupying streets of the city without authority, that it was a beneficiary of the City of Kansas, and that it was daily violating the ordinances of the city. Alderman Ford said that it was right and proper for the council to pass a resolution requesting the city counselor to bring action against the company, but he spoke against the resolution because, as he said, it contained assertions foreign to the matter under consideration. And this led to a wordy conflict between Alderman Ford and the chair, which soon assumed a decidedly personal nature. Alderman Davidson said it would be a good idea if a committee was appointed to confer with the railroad company, and possibly some arrangement could be made by which the bridge would be restored. He thought another location might be selected if the former site was found to be reasonably objectionable to the company. The resolution was finally referred to a special committee consisting of Aldermen Davidson, Granfield and Ford.

The ordinance appropriating money for the construction of the Wyoming street viaduct, last night passed the council, and the bridge for which Alderman Salisbury has been scheming and working for two years or more, will now be built. It is a measure, which has, in times past, produced considerable discussion and an appropriation of $15,000 was made last year to pay the city's share of the cost of the building of the viaduct.

An ordinance was introduced, appropriating money to raise the grade of Fifth street, near Grand avenue. The engineer stated that at the point mentioned the street had sunk about a foot on the north side and that the tracks of the Corrigan street railway company were several inches above the surface of the street, but were still slightly below the grade. The settling of the street is due to the fact that at that point it crosses an old ravine.

Several ice dealers appeared before the council last night and asked the tax of $150 per annum which the "milk" ordinance imposes upon them, be changed so that they shall be taxed only for the time they deliver ice, which amounts to about seven months out of the twelve. This would make the tax about $87 for the seven months. A resolution was introduced requesting the city attorney to not proceed against the companies until after the first of next April. The dealers represented that they were willing to pay a tax but thought it should conform in amount to that paid by companies engaged in other legitimate business.

Some little debate arose over an ordinance to pave Walnut street, from Fifth to Twelfth streets. The engineer stated that when the petition was obtained it was thought that Mr. Holmes would pave his portion of the street at the same time the city paved, but since he had introduced an ordinance for a cable line it was plain that he did not intend to do so. Under the circumstances the engineer did not know whether he could let the contract on the strength of the present petition. He said he had addressed a letter to Mr. Holmes in reference to the matter, and the latter replied that the city might pave within eighteen inches of the space to be occupied by his street railroad tracks, and he would then board the unpaved space until such time as he began the construction of his cable road. The members of the council were unanimous in the opinion that the improvement of an important street should not be delayed a year on account of a street railway company, and the ordinance was passed.

MAXWELL IN COURT.

THE COUNTS IN THE INDICTMENT.

A Motion to Discharge Rejected—Found Dead on the Track—Tariff Talk—A Swindling Circular—Other Late Local and Telegraphic News of the Day.

Special Telegram to The Star.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 14.—The criminal court was filled this afternoon with spectators eager to catch a glimpe of Maxwell, who, was to be arraigned on the charge of murdering C. Arthur Preller. The arraignment took place at 2:30 p. m. The prisoner pleaded not guilty and his counsel filed a motion to discharge, alleging that the original information in the other court was not sworn to and his arrest was consequently illegal. The indictment of Maxwell contains three counts. The first count charges that Hugh Matham Brooks, alias W. H. Maxwell, alias Walter H. L. Maxwell, alias Theodore Creil D. Anquier, on the 5th of April, 1885, feloniously administered to Charles Arthur Preller a deadly poison (chloroform), which Preller inhaled into his lungs and became unconscious and insensible and while in that condition that defendant choked, suffocated and strangled him. The second count charges the administration of the poison, and that while Preller was in a helpless condition the defendant, with both his hands upon and about the neck and body of him, the said Arthur Preller then and there squeezed into and confined him in a certain large zink trunk, and did then and there securely tie and fasten down the lid of said trunk with ropes and straps, whereby the said Charles Arthur Preller was then and there smothered. The third count charges that by foul means, devices, instruments and weapons the defendant deprived Preller of his life. The motion for discharge was denied and Maxwell remanded to jail without bail, to await trial upon the indictment.

AFTER THE FIRE.

How Galveston Looks To-day—Relief Coming from Every Direction.

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 14.—The weather today is spring-like and business was generally resumed, but the city has a holiday air about it. People are moving quietly about with very sad faces. Several thousand people constantly visits the burnt district and small smouldering fires are still seen here and there. The fire department is tearing down dangerous buildings and clearing the streets in the vicinity. The relief committees are actively at work and every poor, homeless family has been comfortably, but temporarily, sheltered. Telegrams of sympathy and aid continue to arrive. Gov. Ireland sent $500, the city of Denison $250, and even Fargo, Dak., telegraphs $50. The people of Dallas, Fort Worth, Austin, San Antonia, Houston and other cities are sending private contributions to unfortunate friends.

The Telephone Cases.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 14.—The hearing in the telephone case was resumed this morning. A number of affidavits were submitted, and without being read were placed on file. Among them were affidavits of F. L. Pope and C. A. Randall, electricians, of New York city. Pope, on behalf of the Bell Co. states in his affidavit that after carefully comparing drawings of the Reiss apparatus with the instruments alleged by petitioners to be constructed in adcordance with these drawings essential modifications have been introduced consisting of features of construction found in telephone instruments which have been invented since the issue of the Bell patent. The most important of these is the mounting of the contact point upon a weight carried at the end of a delicate spring, which is an improvement patented by Blake in his well known transmitter. The contact surface of the Reiss instrument is formed of carbon, a substance the peculiar adaptability of which, to this purpose, was not discovered until 4878. There are other modes in details of construction of the Reiss telephone, all of which, Pope says, tend to approximate it to the modern telephone apparatus and to depart from construction and mode of operation of the original apparatus of Reiss.

Mr. Randall, on the other hand, in his affidavit, maintains that the Reiss apparatus is a speaking telephone independent of these modifications. The argument was begun, Mr. Humphreys, of the Globe company, opening. He reviewed the history of the telephone litigation, and argued that opposing companies could not obtain a fair judicial investigation of the matter except by suit instituted by the government.

Dr. Beckwith argued in support of the claims of Wenci as the inventor of the telephone in 1855, and insisted that his client could not obtain his rights unless aided by the government.

Another Account of the Execution.

Special Telegram to The Star.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—At 12 noon to-day three men—Argostero Gilardo, Igrazio Sylvestri and Giovanni Azzaro, commonly known as the Italian murderers—paid the extreme penalty of the law and suffered death by hanging in the county jail. About 300 persons witnessed the execution. At 8:30 a. m. high mass was celebrated in the library of the jail. The doomed men seemed to be in a sort of stupor. It seems almost as if by some merciful provision they did not fully realize what was going on. No one was present at this ceremony but the murderers and their spiritual advisers. At 11:45 they were interviewed by a messenger who announced that the time had arrived for them to bid farewell to the world. Their swarthy faces were blanched, but otherwise they betrayed no signs of emotion. The march from the library to the gallows was a short one. The condemned men were not shackled until placed on the drop. Then their limbs were pinioned, the nooses tightened, caps pulled down over their faces, the signal given, drop fell and the murderers of Fillippo Caruso were dangling at the ropes' ends. There was but a slight struggle. It is believed that their necks were broken by the fall.

Tariff Talk.

Special Telegram to The Star.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—"While there will not be any revolutionary measures adopted in connection with the tariff this winter," said Representative A. S. Willis, of Kentucky, "still there are inequalities which must be overcome and disposed of as speedily as possible. I have always concluded that hundreds of thousands of dollars have been annually lost to the government by the failure to appropriate money to carry on existing improvements on rivers and harbors. Had the last house agreed to appropriate one third of the money the river and harbor committee recommended progress would have been made on some of the most important work intended to benefit commerce. Already conventions have been held in the southwest along the lakes by friends of the Mississippi river and the Hennepin canal, and these interests will come before the next congress for consideration and decisive action.

A Vicious Career Ended.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 14.—Alf. Little, called the Breathitt county desperado, was to-day sentenced in the United States circuit court for sixteen years on the charge of forging pension papers and postoffice orders. Little is 45 years old and credited with the murder men. Before he reached the age of manhood he killed one of his playmates. Later he murdered three brothers. Once when passing a sick man's house the devil took possession of him and he entered the sick chamber, dragged the invalid out of bed and kicked him to death. A year or so ago militia had to be ordered to suppress Little.

Will Defend Themselves.

SOFIA, Nov. 14.—The following has just been issued by the government: "The Servians, having invaded Bulgaria to-day, near Tsaribrad, before declaring war, Bulgaria has decided to uphold the national cause by all means at her disposal." Intense excitement prevails. Active preparations are being made to defend the city. A number of heavy guns are being mounted in available positions, which command different roads to the city.

Found Dead.

Special Telegram to The Star.

INDEPENDENCE, Neb., Nov. 13.—A well dressed man was found dead last night on the Missouri Pacific track, just west of this city. He had been killed by the east bound Texas express. Papers found on his person indicate that his name was George W. Grandstaff, of either Dunbar or Nebraska City, Neb. Further than this nothing is known about him. He was a fine looking man, not a tramp, but doubtless in poor circumstances.

A Big Battle Expected.

BELGRADE, Nov. 14.—The Servian division marching from Pirot direct on Sofia will probably have the first decisive battle of the war early to-morrow, when they are expected to reach the difficult and rocky gorge of the Dragoman defile, where a number of Bulgarian battalions have been congregated and where a stand may be made.

Poisoned Herself and Children.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The police, to-day, found Mrs. Alfred Fritz and her two children dead in bed at their home, 183 Grand street. The furniture of the room was meagre and the cupboard bare of provisions. It is thought the woman poisoned herself and children. The matter is being investigated.

A Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Frink and family wish to thank all the friends who have been so kind to them in this, their hour of affliction, and particularly so the "Elks," who have been so devoted and untiring in their attentions.

KANSAS CITY, MO., Nov. 14, 1885.

The First Fight.

BELGRADE, Nov. 14.—Dispatches from the front state that a sharp fight occurred between the advance guards of the Servian and Bulgarian armies on the road between Tien and Blasnia. The Bulgarians retired.

Stocks Took a Tumble.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The declaration of war by Servia against Bulgaria caused a depression in the London stock market. The English railway sureties and European bonds fell 2 per cent.

A Correction.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The dispatch yesterday announcing the divorce of Lady Lampson from Sir Curtis Lampson was incorrectly made to refer to Sir Curtis Miranda Lampson. It should have been Sir George Curtis Lampson, son of the former.

An Odd Character.

Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

An odd old character recently died in Cavendish, Vt. His name was David Ordway, and he and his ancestors ran an ancient grist mill on the "Twenty-mile stream." David had a costly coffin made and fitted to himself years before his death and kept it in his front parlor to cheer his guests. He paid a Universalist minister $100 to have his funeral sermon preached some years ago, and was borne with dirges dire in sad array down the aisle of the crowded church laid out in his coffin. It was the sensation of the year where he lived. One of his millstones now forms the base of a simple monument that tells in quaint, illiterate phrase that "tho I am dead yet speaketh, for here is rest upon this millstone top I set this noble block to let the world know what I have done." One of the things he did was to fix upon a certain day to harvest a big piece of grain. When the day came he saw that it was going to rain, and seizing a firebrand he rushed into the field and burned up his harvest.

He Didn't Have to Own the Trunk.

Healdsburg (Cal.) Enterprise.

At one of the stations of the San Francisco & North Pacific railroad a few Sundays since an elderly gentleman got off the cars to take brief observations during the stoppage of the train. The assistant at the station rushed out and made a regular baggage-smasher's attack on a trunk, which he slammed about with a reckless disregard for consequences. The old man interposed: "Young man, won't you break that trunk?" The "young man" turned a withering look upon the old gentleman and impudently inquired: "What's the matter with you? Do you own this trunk?" "No, sir!" came back in a tone that evinced much indignation, "but I'll have you to understand, sir, that I own this railroad." As Colonel Donahue moved back to the train the limp young man reclined against the station for support.

An Interesting Letter.

Portland Oregonian.

In 1872, something over thirteen years ago, Andrew Brown, of Clark county, W. T., addressed a letter to a person living in East Portland, which letter was mailed at Vancouver. About a month ago Mr. Brown had the same letter returned to him through the dead letter office at Washington. There have been many complaints about the management of the East Portland postoffice, but none of them had introduced thirteen years' travels of a letter into their details until this instance. It is evident that the letter did not reach Washington until within the present year.

Sneak Thief Arrested.

For some time past various articles have been missed from the store of Roll, Thayer, Williams & Co. Three men have been noticed in the several departments of the store making frequent visits, but their purchases were always very light. Yesterday a young lady clerk watched the customers closely and became convinced they were pilfering anything they could. Two of the men then got into the elevator and the floor walker was notified to search them. They were searched but nothing found on their persons. The third man shortly after was about to leave when he was searched and stolen goods found on him. He was arrested.

A Bad Accident.

Last evening, about 6:30 o'clock, a man in the second story of the building at 1333 Grand avenue lighted a lamp, which exploded. He threw it down the stairway and struck Mrs. E. J. Mayers, who was entering the house. Her clothes caught fire and she ran to the street a blazing mass. A man who happened to be near her at the time threw his coat around her, thereby smothering the flames. Her legs and arms were badly burned.

A Fallen Scaffold.

The scaffold to a building on Hickory street suddenly gave way yesterday afternoon and three men on it at the time it fell to the ground. Will King was cut about the face and hands, but the other two escaped with slight bruises.
